Scott Barlow, MBA, CEO, Central Utah Clinic

Mr. Barlow serves as the CEO of Central Utah Clinic, the largest independent physician group in the State of Utah. Central Utah Clinic employs over 900 individuals with 132 physicians and 60 Nurse

Practioners/Physicians Assistants, practicing at 37 urban and rural locations throughout the State of Utah. Central Utah Clinic has received numerous national awards for the successful implementation of an Electronic Health Record becoming paperless in early 2003 and recognition for the attractive and patient friendly building designs used at their locations in Provo and American Fork, Utah. The practice model, effective technology deployment and strong leadership has resulted in a sustained growth rate in excess of 25% per year for the past eight years. Central Utah Clinic now provides over 300,000 patient visits annually and has been a national Medical Group Management Association top performing practice for the past 8 years.

Scott has been in the healthcare industry for 21 years, with 20 years in group practice management. He originally was the Associate Director for the non-profit community health centers located in Salt Lake County and has spent the past 15 years in private group practice management. Mr. Barlow holds a Bachelor degree in Accounting and an MBA in Health Care Administration. He is an active member of Medical Group Management Association and Utah Medical Group Management Association. He also serves on various community task forces and boards, including the Nebo Education Foundation, Provo/Orem Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors & Government Review Committee, Governor's appointed commissioner on the Utah Digital Health Service Commission, Regence Blue Cross & Blue Shield Community board and more. He has a keen sense of the health needs of the community and actively pursues programs to improve health services to patients.
